The Maratha-Sikh Treaty

OF 1785*

With the arrival of Emperor Shah Alam II in the protection of Mahadji Sindhia, it became necessary for him to protect the Imperial Capital and its neighbourhood and to repel the incursions of the Sikhs that were threatening them. With the Emperor's approbation, it was Mahadji's intention to place His Majesty in the fort of Delhi, and, then, to lead an expedition against the Sikhs. But he could not leave the siege of Agra, and then of Dig, into hands other than his own. He, therefore, entrusted the management of his affairs at Delhi to one of his lieutenants, Ambaji Ingle, and on the 19th of January, 1785, got him appointed the Faujdar of the 28 Mahals of Sonapat, etc., bordering on the Sikh territories. This part of the country was then in a disturbed state. Ambaji feared opposition from the Sikhs on the one hand, and from the Rohelas of Ghausgarh on the other. But as Zabita Khan was not keeping good health, there was very little fear of disturbance from his side. Moreover, his eldest son Ghulam Qadir Khan had been for years under the protection of Mahadji Sindhia himself and had been lately reconciled and sent back to his father. This had cemented their cordial relations. The death of Zabita Khan on January 27, 1785, however, left no cause of anxiety for the Maratha Chief, because a protege of Mahadji himself was now to succeed him and he could be easily brought to terms. It was the Sikhs alone whose presence in the neighbourhood of Delhi was a source of anxiety to Mahadji Sindhia. Ambaji's main mission, therefore, was to protect the capital from them and to contract a friendly alliance with their Sardars so as to remove all danger to the Imperial territories from that quarter.

While conveying to Mr. Hastings at Calcutta the news of the death of Zabita Khan, Major James Browne wrote from Dig on February 1st, 1785, "it is probable that Scindiah will support him [Ghulam Qadir] in the succession on certain terms. At Present the Seiks are likely to interfere, their Grand Camp [the Dal Khalsaji] being in that district, and this may produce hostilities between them and the Marathas." Any interference on the part of the Sikhs in the succession of Ghulam Qadir to the office of his father was feared to cause a disturbance in the peaceful administration of the capital and its neighbourhood. Mahadji, therefore, could ill-afford to displease the Sikh Sardars. Lieutenant James Anderson, the British Resident with Mahadji Sindhia, tells us in his letter dated 1st February, 1785, addressed to Warren Hastings, "He has lately dismissed the Vakeels from the Seiks with presents to their Chiefs and I understand he has offered to take 5,000 of them into his service." [For. Deptt. Secret Consult., 19th February, 1785.]

Mahadji could see that as long as the Sikhs were free to carry their incursions unopposed into the territories under his protection, he could not establish his own government successfully. Nor could he, without befriending the Sikhs, reduce the power of the various Mughal Jagirdars, amongst whom a great part of the country had been parcelled out. He, therefore, wished to divert the attention of the Sikhs from his side. There was only one other side in this part of the country to which the Sikhs could be turned, and that was of the Nawab Vizir of Oudh. [Lieut. James Anderson to the Hon'ble John Macpherson, Governor General, 23rd March, 1785.]

The first intelligence of the Nawab Vizir of Oudh apprehending "a combination to be formed betwixt Scindia and the Seiks of a nature hostile to the Vizier" was forwarded from Fatehgarh on the 4th February, 1785, by Colonel Sir John Cumming to Major General Hibbert, the Commander-in-Chief, on the authority of a letter from Major Palmer, the Resident at Lucknow. "The great Camp of the Seiks" had "passed the Ganges into the Vizier's country" in the second week of January and had plundered Chandausi on the 3rd Rabi-ul-awwal, 1199 Hijri, 15th January, 1785.*

On the 12th Rabi-ul-awwal, 24th January, while the Sikh Sardars Baghel Singh, Jassa Singh Ramgarhia, Gurdit Singh, Sawan Singh, Bhag Singh and others were encamped near Benampur and were waiting for Sardar Karam Singh Nirmala, letters were received from the army of Mahadji Sindhia. According to Major Browne's informant, "they left the Army and went under the trees where they had consultation and read the letters. We hear from some of them that Baghel Singh had advised that the plunder should be left to the other side of the Jumna and...ten or fifteen thousand horse, being crossed again over the river, should go plundering as far as Bareilly." [Intel. of the Seik Army, 12th Rabi-ul-awwal, 1199; Major Browne to Hastings, 28th January, 1785.]

When the Sikh horsemen returned after examining the fords for crossing the river, Sardars Jassa Singh, Gurdit Singh and Baghel Singh held consultations and decided "that they must with expedition cross the river and plunder some place. At this time the news arrived that Navab Zabita Khan was dead. Upon hearing this, Baghel Singh said that it was proper to cross the river towards Ghousghurra [Ghausgarh]."

On the 20th Rabi-ul-awwal, 1199, 1st February, 1785, while the Sikh Army was encamped four kos to the west of the river opposite to the "Sebulghurrah" Ghat, fourteen kos from Sitabad, Ambaji arrived with letters from Rao Partap Singh of Macheri and from Raju (?) Mall, the

Raja Jagannath, the Amil of Rohelkhand, "affirmed to me," wrote Sir John Cumming to the Hon'ble John Macpherson from Anupshahr on February 27, 1785, "that Moraudabad has not been touched and that the depredations were confined solely to the towns of Chandaucy and Sumbul. He acknowledged that the bazaars of these two places were pillaged and burnt and that a considerable number of bullocks loaded with plunder found there had been carried across the river." Vakil of Baghel Singh in Mahadji's Camp. The following is the substance of Rao Partap Singh's letter :—

The expulsion of the Turks will be easily effected, and it is a business in which your religion is concerned. If you are desirous of joining in the attempt, give immediate information, so that, having settled the matter with Scindia, I may send the necessaries. Many particulars will be told you by Hurjee Ambazee which you will consider as true. I am going to Apajee to the neighbourhood of Delhi. Where you may appoint, I will have an interview. Scindia is turning his thoughts to the conquest of new countries." And the Vakil of Baghel Singh wrote to his master :—

"Having settled all negotiations with Scindia in the firmest manner, I have received my dismissal and am coming with Apajee. As soon as the army arrives in the neighbourhood of Delhi, I shall quit it and being soon arrived at your presence will inform you of Scindia's design."

[Intell. of the Seik Army, 21st Rabi-ul-awwal, 1199, 2nd Feby., 1785; Major Browne to Warren Hastings, dated Deig 9th Feby., 1785.]

On the following day, 2nd February, 1785, news arrived that Sardar Karam Singh, Sardar Dulcha Singh, Sardar Rai Singh and other Sikh Chiefs had arrived from the neighbourhood of Ghausgarh and were encamped four or five kos from the Khalsa Army. Immediately Baghel Singh went for an interview with Sardar Karam Singh Nirmala and "shewed him the letters of Scindia and Raja Himmut Behadur, and the arzee of Raju Mall Vakeel and the letter of Row Pertaub Sing of Machree addressed to him and informed him of Hurzee Ambazie's arrival and negociation." [James Browne to Hastings, 9th February, 1785, with enclosures.]

"Having written an answer to the letter of Row Pertaub Singh, they sent off Hurjee Ambajee" on the 5th February. The answer mentioned "that they will first have an interview with him, and, then, agreeable to what he may advise, join him with the greatest pleasure."

On Sunday the 6th February, 1785, the Camp of the Dal Khalsaji, or the Grand Army of the Sikhs, moved to the neighbourhood of Daryapur about two kos from the Ghat of Maheshgarh. Hearing of the projected invasion of his territories by the Sikhs and finding himself incapable of opposing the invincible Dal, Ghulam Qadir Khan deputed Haji Hussain Khan to wait upon the Sikh Sardars Jassa Singh and others, offering to pay the usual tribute for Raakhi (protection) and Karah Prasad and requesting them "to remove their Army from his country and not to ruin the villages." [Intell. of the Seik Army, 26th Rabi-ul-awwal, 1199, 7th February, 1785.]

This surrender of Ghulam Qadir Khan added to the anxieties of Mahadji Sindhia and alarmed him about the fate of the Imperial Capital and the neighbouring territories at the hands of the Sikhs. He was further alarmed at the movements of the British troops under the command of Colonel Sir John Cumming who had, in fact, marched out of Fatehgarh to defend the Nawab Vizir's territories from the incursion of the Khalsa Dal. Negotiations were, therefore, started with the Colonel with a view to ascertaining the intentions of the Company's Government and to assure him of his own good will towards them.

Upon the arrival of Colonel Sir John Cumming at Anupshahr, a Maratha Vakil, says the Colonel in his despatch dated February 27, waited on him with a letter from Malhar Bapu, "a person of great trust and confidence with Scindia and who rents all the districts situated betwixt Delhi and this part of His Excellency the Vizier's dominions." The letter assured him, as did the Vakil verbally, that the Marathas had ordered all their officials to afford every possible assistance in point of supplies to the British troops, whether encamped on their frontiers or passing through any part of their districts. "Understanding that the march of the troops from Futtygurrh has alarmed Scindia and the Mahratta Government," Sir John continues, "I have judged it necessary, both in my letter to Mulhar Baboo and in my conversation with his Vakil to give the strongest assurances of the friendship and attachment of our Government towards the Mahrattas. I have begged him to inform Scindia that the sole object of the march of this detachment was the defence of the Vizier's frontiers from the incursion of the Seiks. And I have added that should the Seiks come down in such force that the Mahratta troops on this frontier should be unable to repel them, I am ready to assist them against the Seiks as a proof of the friendship of our Government towards the Pateal," provided the Marathas on their own part also "would give a proof of the sincerity of their friendship towards us by attacking some bodies of the Seiks that had lately made an incursion into Rohilcund and now hovered on our frontier. And I concluded with assuring them that whenever the Seiks should be compelled to return to their own Country, and we should be satisfied that no further danger was to be apprehended from these plunderers, I should return to Futtoghurr with the troops I brought with me from thence."* [Secret Consult., March 22, 1785; John Cumming to John Macpherson, 27th March, 1785; Secret Consult., April 12, 1785.]

*This assurance of Colonel Cumming to the Marathas was not considered politic by Major General Hibbert, the Commander-in-Chief, who thus expressed his opinion to the Governor-General and the members of the Supreme Council, Secret Dept., in his letter of the 4th April, 1785:-

"With respect to the assurance of the amity of this Government given by Colonel Cumming and his offers of co-operating with him to expel the Seiks, I suppose he must have some authority for judging that they will be agreeable to the intentions of the Board. I shall only observe that however prudent it may be to preserve the friendship of Scindia, it will not, I think, be politic to assist him against the other powers to the westward, for the more he is involved in troubles with them, the more will his present schemes of dominion be retarded, and the less leisure will he have to meditate hostile designs against the Vizier. And it may be apprehended that should he acquire universal power over the Countries held in the name of the King towards which he is advancing with hasty strides, his ambition may lead him to pursue further scheme of conquest. At least he will become, if not actually a troublesome and dangerous enemy, a neighbour whose designs must always be suspected and guarded against.

The Board agreed with the Commander-in-Chief and warned Sir John Cumming in their letter dated Fort William the 9th April, 1785 against giving effect to his

This stroke of Cumming's diplomacy succeeded in bringing about a rupture between the Marathas and the Sikhs and the two came to grips in the neighbourhood of Panipat. To prove to the satisfaction of Cumming the sincerity of their friendship for the Company's Government, the troops under Ambaji and Malhar Bapu attacked a body of about five hundred Sikhs, killed two hundred of them and took seventy horses. This unwarranted attack on the part of the Marathas under Malhar Bapu and Ambaji, while their master Mahadji Sindhia was making overtures for a friendly alliance through Rao Partap Singh of Macheri and Raju Mall Vakil of Sardar Baghel Singh, caused great resentment amongst the Sikh Sardars. They retired beyond Panipat to their own frontier and drew together a force of twenty thousand cavalry, a body of infantry and a few guns. They then attacked the town of Panipat, plundered and burnt it and cut off an entire battalion of sepoy that were in garrison there. This battalion was one of those formerly commanded by Sumro, and now in the service of Sindhia.

While conveying this intelligence to the Hon'ble John Macpherson, Sir John Cumming wrote from Anupshahr on March 27, 1785, "I have also information of their having cut off another battalion, but the Maratha Vakeels not admitting the truth of this last intelligence, I do not give it as altogether certain. I consider it a point of utmost consequence to engage these two powers in hostility and no endeavours have been wanting on my part to effect it." "By engaging Ambajee and Mulhar Baboo in hostilities with the Seiks," he wrote two days later, "I am happy to assurance to the Marathas.

"We have very maturely considered the subject of these letters and think it necessary to restrain you from giving effect to the offer which you have made to Scindia until you shall have received our sanction and authority for that purpose. We do not wish to interfere in Scindiah's disputes with other powers to the westward. We are not sure that it would not be most politic to allow them their fullest operation."

[Secret Consult., 12th April, 1785.]

observe that I have chalked out sufficient employment for their forces at present." [Col. Cumming to Major General Hibbert, 18th March, 1785, Secret Consult., 9th April, 1785; Cumming to Macpherson, 27th March, 1785, Secret Consult., 12th April, 1785; Cumming to Macpherson, 29th March, 1785.]

The Sikhs had now lost all faith in the sincerity of Mahadji's negotiations for a friendly alliance. They needed no proof of his hostile attitude towards themselves, as it had already expressed itself through the behaviour of his lieutenants. They also perhaps saw in this behaviour the hidden intentions of Mahadji to possess himself of some of the Sikh territories, as he himself later on confessed it to Lieut. Anderson on the 13th April as one of the objects of the Treaty of 31st March. To safeguard their interests, therefore, they chose to ally themselves with the East India Company and opened friendly negotiations with them.

Having been assured of the friendly intentions of the Company through the messages of Sir John Cumming to himself in the last week of February, Mahadji turned his attention to the Sikhs and the Mughal officials and jagirdars at the Capital.* So far his measures in this quarter had involved him in much additional expense without any substantial advantage in return. He found that the system pursued by Mirza Najjaf Khan, the Wazir-ul-Mumalik at Delhi, and his successors had parcelled out in jagirs a great part of the country amongst their friends and followers. He could not, therefore, derive any benefit from his position there without their resumption. But it was not an easy task and could not be hastily materialized. His impoverished finances, however, left him with no alternative. As a preparative to a more general measure, he was induced, to begin with, "to take possession of jagheers of the princes, with a promise to pay them an equivalent in money. But the step was so viol-

*The first intelligence of Scindia's negotiations for an engagement with the Sikhs, for active assistance 'with troops, whenever he may require them, for a certain subsidy' was received by Major James Browne on March 6th, and he transmitted it to the Hon'ble John Macpherson on the 8th in his letter from Agra. (Secret Consult., 5th April, 1785.)

ently resented by the King that Scindia was forced to recede from it.” “In the meantime the Mughal Chiefs,” according to Anderson’s despatch of 23rd March from Sindhia’s Camp near Agra, “have had sufficient cause of alarm on this head, and it was suspected that some of the principal amongst them have entered into a secret confederacy with the Seiks for an eventual junction with them in case of the resumption of their jagheers.”

The surrender of Ghulam Qadir to the Sikhs and the detachment of several of the Mughal Chiefs, for a combination with them hastened the counsels of Mahadji for a speedy reconciliation with the Sikh Sardars.

Ambaji had by now had the experience of an armed conflict with them and of the heavy loss that their retaliation had inflicted upon him in cutting off a battalion of sepoy at Panipat. Cumming told Anderson on March 31st that “they think of nothing but the Seiks. ... The Seiks have again crossed the Jumna and Ambajee and Mulhar are not able to look them in the face, which they at last from necessity confessed to me. [Secret Consult., 12th April, 1785.]

Fearful of the continued retaliation from the Sikhs and further humiliation at their hands, which might bring him to disgrace in the eyes of his master, Ambaji actively busied himself in the last week of March, 1785, to effect a reconciliation with them; and sought the mediation of Maharao Partap Singh of Macheri to bring it to a successful conclusion. Partap Singh, as we know, had already been in correspondence with the Sikhs and had invited them to join hands with Mahadji Sindia for “the expulsion of the Turks” and “the conquest of new countries” from the Nawab Vizir of Oudh, the Mughal Chiefs of Delhi and the Rajas of Jaipur and Marwar. Rao Partap Singh and Ambaji marched northwards and held consultations with the Sikh Sardars at Bakhtawarpur, 13 miles north of Delhi, from 27th March to 31st, and the following Treaty was concluded between Ambaji and the Sikh Sardars.

COPY OF THE TREATY CONCLUDED BETWEEN RAJA AMBAJI INGLE AND THE CHIEFS OF THE SIKHS,
31ST MARCH, 1785.

Between this party (Raja Ambaji) and the Chiefs Bughel Sing Bahadur, Kurrum Sing Bhahadur, Dooljah Sing, Bhak Sing, Dewan Sing, Baak Sing Dilowalah, Gohir Sing and the other Chiefs of the Khalsajee (the Seik Government) in friendship with the above mentioned Chiefs, an unity of Interests and Friendship has been established on oath, through the intervention of Maha Row Purtap Sing Bahadur.

The friends and enemies and the prosperity and adversity of each are mutual. Not the smallest degree of jealousy or difference subsists between us; and God is witness that there shall be no deviation.

The Seik Government from a consideration of the firm friendship that is established agree to forego their exactions of Raakee, and this party, from the share he now takes in their interest, agrees to go himself in person or depute some other to his master the Maha Rajah (Sindia) in order to promote the settlement of the objects of the Seik Chiefs in regard to a provision for their expenses &c., and whatever may be settled by the Maha Rajah shall be duly performed.

Of whatever either on this side or that side of the Jumna, independent of the Royal Territories, may be taken in concert with each other from the Hindoos and Mussulmans, one third shall be given to the Seik Chiefs together with other points settled for them.

Marching and halting and other points, great and small, shall be settled with the mutual consent of the parties.

The contracting parties shall unite their Forces to repress any disturbances that may be excited by their enemies.

On the conclusion of the Treaty, Ambajee sent it on to Mahadji Sindhia for his approbation. Mahadji desired him to come up personally to his camp, and he arrived there on the night of the 10th April, 1785. [Major Palmer to the Governor General, and James Anderson to the Same, both dated 11th April, 1785; For. Dept. Secret Consult., 26th April, 1785.]

In the meantime Lieut. James Anderson, the Resident with Mahadji Sindhia, Colonel Sir John Cumming, the officer commanding the detachment of the Company's troops on the frontier, and Major Palmer, the Resident at Lucknow, had been reporting to the Government at Calcutta the news and their views regarding the Treaty. They saw in its materialization a danger to the political interests of the East India Company and to the territories of their friend the Nawab Vizir of Oudh. Therefore, they directed all their efforts towards its nullification by whatever means it could be brought about.

Lieut. James Anderson waited on Mahadji Sindhia on Wednesday, the 13th April, to have "some satisfactory explanations in regard to his late negotiations with the Seiks." "He immediately acquiesced," wrote Anderson on the next day, "and having caused the original treaty to be produced and read, he proceeded to make some remarks upon it. The first article, he observed, wherein the friends and enemies of each are specified to be mutual, ought to be considered by us as a full refutation of any insidious reports, that might have spread, of its evil tendency towards us. As to the other articles, he said, he had two objects in view from them; the one was by aiding the party of the Seiks, with whom he had formed the treaty, against their enemies in the state, to possess himself, in virtue of their agreement of partition, of a great part of their country; and the second was to avail himself of their assistance in the reduction of the Jey-pore and Marwar Rajahs, who had of late withheld their tribute from him. ... I mentioned to him, however, that the specification of the Hindoos and Mussulmans on this and that side of the Jumna might be liable to wrong interpretations, and that I thought it would be better if stated in absolute and irrelative manner.

"He added that as he was answerable for the peaceable behaviour of the Seiks towards the Vizier as the ally of his friends the English, so he expected that we should be answerable for the conduct of the Vizier towards him. ...

"Mahajee made uncommon solicitude to vindicate himself against the insidious reports which had been propagated against him, and to assert the warmth of his friendship for the English. Possibly his fears, excited by the conduct of Colonel Cumming, may have had some effect over him on this occasion. ...

"These two [objects of the treaty as given out by Mahadji] are strongly supported by probability, for the Rajahs of Jeypore and Marwar have both of them for many years past shewed an open contempt for his authority, and his resentment against the former has been heightened by his violation of all the terms of agreement into which he had entered with him last December, and of which the exigency of Sindia's affairs at that time prevented his enforcing the performance. Besides a report, and seemingly well founded, has of late prevailed that that these Rajahs, from their apprehension of Sindia's enmity, have, with a view to defeat the effects of it, been endeavouring to contract an alliance with the Seiks, and to counteract this scheme must have been a very prevalent motive with Sindia for hastening his treaty with them. In regard to his aiding the extensive divisions of the Seiks, however extravagant it may appear, it must be allowed to suit admirably with the crafty policy, by which he has hitherto pursued his objects here. The prosecution of a plan of this nature is at all events much more probable than that of his joining with them in open opposition to us." [James Anderson to Macpherson, 14th April, 1785 ; Secret Consult, 3rd May, 1785.]

On another occasion it was suggested to Sindhia by Lieut. Anderson to include in the Sikh Treaty the English and the Vizier as his friends and allies, and, instead of specifying the conquests to be made on this and that side of the Jumna, it should be absolutely expressed "whatever new conquests might be made." [Anderson to Macpherson, 28th April, 1785 ; Secret Consult, 12th May, 1785.]

A few days later Sardar Dulcha Singh also arrived in the camp of Mahadji Sindhia to settle personally the various other points with him on behalf of the Sikh Sardars. But he was surprised to find the deceit practised upon them by Mahadji. "His original proposals communicated to them verbally by Ambajee were that on relinquishing their demand of Raakee, he would confer on them a jaghier of ten lacs annually, and that whatever countries they might jointly conquer should be divided in a certain proportion between them [one third being the share of the Sikhs]. In place of these terms he now amended that they should relinquish their Raakee, that they should unite their forces with him for the conquest of the territories of those Seik Chiefs with whom they were at variance; that as he did not mean to take any share of the conquests himself, they should consider his cession of the whole as an equivalent for the jaghier, and that, instead of general conquests [with particular reference to Aligarh] that he had proposed to them, he had now expressly excluded them from the territories of the Vizier and the Company, with whom he was in strict friendship." But Sardar Dulcha Singh was not prepared to agree to these amended terms. Mahadji, therefore, detained him in his camp till the signatures of the other Sardars had been subscribed to the new Definitive Treaty. [Anderson to Macpherson, 10 May, 1785; Secret Consult., 26th May, 1785.]

The following is the text of the Definitive Treaty of the 10th May, 1785:-

THE DEFINITIVE TREATY OF 10TH MAY, 1785.

The Chiefs of the Khalsa with a force of 5,000 horse being united in connection with the forces with the victorious army shall receive allowances and a jaghire of 10 lacs of rupees according to the following particulars.

Of this Jaghire $7\frac{1}{2}$ lacs of rupees are in the neighbourhood of Karnal and $2\frac{1}{2}$ from the country of the Sircar, and they shall attend in union, and besides their allowances and Jaghire, the Sircar shall have authority over the whole dependency of Karnal and the country without interference. And if in the authority of the dependency, the authority [? income] should be less than this engagement, something shall instead, therefore, be granted from the Sircar. In case the army of the said Chiefs should be summoned to the Sircar before they have authority and possession in the Jaghire, half a rupee shall be paid from the Sircar for each horseman after they be recorded. And after possession and full authority, no claim of pay for the sepoy shall be attended to. For supporting themselves on the Jaghire and considering their union to be finer than a hair, let them employ themselves in the obedience to orders and let them prevent their people from taking the Raakee in the circuit of the royal place and in the possessions of the Sircar, and by no means let any disagreement remain in future.

I am in friendship with the Chiefs of the English Company and with the Nawab Vizier, let there never be any injury offered to their country.

In this agreement God is between us, so no deviation shall ever happen.

Sd. James Anderson.

During his detention in the camp of Mahadji Sindhia, Sardar Dulcha Singh from necessity agreed to the terms of the Treaty, but he was irritated at the unfriendly treatment that he received at his hands and at the tone of superiority that had been assumed by him. He, therefore, sent a Vakil in the garb of a merchant to Lieutenant James Anderson, the Company's Resident in the Camp. The Vakil saw Anderson's Maulavi, the confidential clerk, on the 9th May, and "complained bitterly of the deceit, which had been practised upon them by Sindia. ... Duljah Singh, he said, being at present in the power of Sindia, had from necessity yielded to these terms, but he declared that as they had discovered clearly the insidious scope of Sindia's designs, they were determined not to adhere to the Treaty. And as Sindia had insinuated that in case of their disagreement, the English would join with him against them, he wished to know what" the real intentions of the English "were in such an event. He concluded by observing that if the English were desirous of a connection with them, he would immediately procure letters ... with the offers of friendship from several of their Chiefs" for the Resident.

As in the opinion of Lieut. Anderson, agreeable to the views of his masters, it was "more favourable to the interests of the Company that they should continue to be disunited," he directed his Maulavi to inform the Sikh Vakil, "that the Seik Chiefs may rest perfectly assured that it is not our intention to take any part with him [Sindhia] against them." He regarded the intercourse of friendship by letters between the Sirk Sardars and the Company's Government "extremely proper," but as his residence in Sindhia's camp rendered it impolitic to become the channel of this correspondence," he suggested "that it should be managed through Major Palmer," the Resident at Lucknow. [Lt. Anderson to Macpherson, 10th May, 1785; Secret Consult., 26th May, 1785.]

The other Sikh Sardars, on hearing of the treatment meted out to their ambassador Sardar Dulcha Singh in the form of his forcible detention in Sindhia's camp, were also disconcerted and they decided to break away with Mahadji, as no reliance could any longer be placed on his promises.

They renewed their negotiations with Colonel Sir John Cumming, the officer commanding the Company's detachment on the Vizir's frontier. The letters of Sardars Gurdit Singh and Baghel Singh forwarded to the Governor-General on May 4th, 1785, exposed to him the anti-English tendencies of Sindhia and his offer of a share of six annas in a rupee from the territories of the Company (evidently those of the Vizir under their protection) that might fall into their joint possession. The Sardars offered to have an alliance with the Company, if the Company wished, and said, "if you will make friendship and alliance with the Chiefs of the Khalsa, know us also on our parts to be inclined to your friendship." [For. Dept. Secret Consult., 26th May, 1785.]

In the meantime Sir John Cumming had received the views of the Government at Calcutta for his guidance in regard to the negotiations from the Sikh Sardars in reply to his previous communications on the subject. They had written to him on the 19th April, 1785, "It is certainly not for the interest either of the Company or the Vizier's Government that the Chiefs of the Sikh tribe should form any friendly connection with the Mahrattas. On the contrary a disunion between them is much to be desired, and if any assurance to the Seiks of our determination not to interfere in such disputes could foment or add to them, such assurances ought to be conveyed." [For. Dept. Secret Consult., 19th April, 1785.]

Sir John Cumming could now clearly see that the Sikhs had lost their faith in the earnestness of Sindhia's alliance with them, and if there were anything that could keep the two together, it was the fear in the minds of the Sikhs that "in case of disagreement with him, the English would join with him against them." If he could remove this fear, even without committing the Company to an alliance with the Sikhs, the object of keeping the two in disunion and hostility to one another could be easily gained. He, therefore, wrote to the Hon'ble John Macpherson, the Governor General, on the 9th May, 1785, "The bad tendency of this is so obvious and striking that, though I shall not write to the [Sikh] Chiefs, I shall, in conformity with your ideas, give them privately the strongest assurances that under no circumstances shall we take any part against them, provided they on their part will abstain from depredations on the Vizier's provinces. I shall adopt the same private mode of encouraging an opinion, which they already entertain, that the success of the Mahratta schemes on this side of India may eventually prove fatal to their power and independence." [For. Dept. Secret Consult., 26th May, 1785.]

In their letter of 26th May, 1785, from Fort William, the Governor General and Council wrote to Colonel Cumming, "We approve of the assurances that you propose to convey to the Seik Chiefs of our determination not to take part against them in the event of a rupture between them and Mahajee Sindhia."

Two more letters from the Sikh Chiefs on the subject of these negotiations, one from Sardars Gurdit Singh and Mohar Singh and another from Sardars Bhanga Singh, Gurdit Sings, (Gur)Bakhsh Singh and Jodh Singh were received by Sir John Cumming and forwarded to the Governor General and the members of the Supreme Council on May 14, 1785. But as there was no fresh cause for a change in the Company's policy, nothing further than the usual assurances from Colonel Sir John Cumming was advanced to the Sikhs.

Thus the treaties of Mahadji Sindhia with the Sikhs and the proposed alliance of the Sikhs with the East India Company in 1785 fell through and did not come to fruition.
